

Vulkanhaus Strohn

VULKAN HAUS STROHN ein MUSEUM der besonderen Art

The House of Volcanoes Strohn is in the village Strohn in the western part of the low Eifel mountain range of the state Rhineland-Palatinate. It is easily reachable by car within 1 ½ hour from the Cologne-Bonn- and the Rhine-Main-area. Leaving the highway the street leads through a strongly volcanic stamped landscape, passing near the imposing Pulvermaar.

The House of Volcanoes Strohn

High floor

Lava-Wall

The museum is dedicated to the volcanism of the Eifel Mountains. The permanent exhibition shows mechanisms how volcanism works, or, for example, how the planet earth is composed, from where magma emendates, and which reasons causes the glowing hot liquids ascending into the earth crust.

Based on game elements and openly presented exhibits volcanism becomes comprehensible. King-sized photos and films of volcanic - and maar-eruptions, connected with a quaking underground, are making a visit to a sensual experience. Main attraction is a 4x6m large lava wall with structures like a dropping candle that was originally rebuild in the museum.

Real volcanic gases can be sniffed. In the House of Volcanoes Strohn also the secret of the development of the Strohn lava bomb of approximately 120 tons is solved – flown through the air or sampling scoria by rolling around?

Strohn Lava Bomb

Contact:

Vulkanhaus Strohn

Hauptstraße 38

D-54558 Strohn Germany

Tel. +49 6573-953721

Fax. +49 6573-953722

info@vulkanhaus-strohn.de

www.vulkanhaus-strohn.de